A BRIEF HISTORY OF SCOTCH WHISKY

1494

The earliest documented record of distilling in Scotland. An entry in the Exchequer Rolls list 'Eight bolls of malt to Friar John Cor wherewith to make aqua vitae'.

1644

The first official taxes on Scotch Whisky production are imposed, causing a rise in illicit whisky distilling across Scotland.

1785

Scotland's bard, Robert Burns, writes the poem 'Scotch Drink' which includes the line 'O thou, my muse! guid auld Scotch drink!'

1831

Aeneas Coffey invents the Patent Still. This led to the production of lighter flavoured Grain Whisky which, when blended with more fiery malts, extended the appeal of Scotch Whisky.

1880

The phylloxera beetle devastates French vineyards. Scots are quick to take advantage and Scotch Whisky replaced brandy as the spirit of choice.

1920

Prohibition begins in the United States of America. The federal government made an exemption for whisky prescribed by a doctor for medicinal purposes.

1939

World War II reshaped the industry's history. One cabinet minister said, the country needs food, dollars mean food, and whisky means dollars. Annual export targets were agreed and producers increasingly looked to overseas markets.

1994

The 500th anniversary of whisky production in Scotland. Exports of Scotch Whisky reach £2 billion for the first time in history.

2018

Scotch Whisky is the world's undisputed premier whisky. 39 bottles of Scotch are shipped from Scotland every second to nearly 200 markets around the globe.
